Preface

The Pacific Standard Classification of Occupation 2016 (PACSCO 2016) is derived from the International Standard Classification of Occupation 2008 (ISCO-08) and classifies jobs common in the Pacific Islands Countries and Territories (PICTs).

The classification is contained in two volumes:

- Volume 1: Structure and Group Definitions
- Volume 2: Index of Occupational Titles

PACSCO 2016 Volume 2 is the Index of Occupational Titles that lists occupations and titles together with their respective codes. It provides a map between “real world” terms used to describe jobs and the formally named titles of occupations defined in the classification structure. Similar indexes can be used in national settings as tools to assign classification codes to responses to questions (coding) on occupation in statistical and administrative data collections. It is important to note that national indexes of occupations need to be based on terms (vernacular) used in response to questions in data collections in the national context.

The main purposes and likely uses of the PACSCO 2016 index are:

- to clarify the occupational content of each PACSCO 2016 occupation group;
- to help users of PACSCO 2016 to find particular categories in the classification and determine where particular occupations are classified;
- to serve as a model for, and act as a starting point in, the development of national indexes of occupations;
- to assign responses in statistical collections in situations where no national index exists, and where countries are not able to develop a national index in advance of data processing.¹

The index is based on the official occupation titles used in PACSCO 2016 Volume 1 and the examples listed under the definitions of each category. Thus there are more index entries than simply the names of categories.

The occupation titles are expressed in singular form for all occupations except for “N.E.C.” (not elsewhere classified) categories which are in plural.

The Index is published in alphabetical order and code order. The alphabetical order helps assign PACSCO 2016 codes to survey responses. The code order is useful to see what is included under each occupation category.

PACSCO 2016 Index of Occupational Titles can be obtained from the SPC website: <http://www.spc.int/prism>. To get an excel copy of Volume 2 an email can be sent to: spc@spc.int. The excel copy may be used as a starting point in the development of national coding indexes without breach of SPC copyright.

The index is a living document and can be added to when new occupation titles arise. Suggestions on inclusions should be emailed to: spc@spc.int.

¹ As there are wide variations in the usage and meaning of occupational terminology, even between countries that speak the same language, it is strongly recommended that countries develop national indexes based on words (vernacular) that are actually given, or are likely to be given, in response to questions on occupation in the national context.
